

Here are three common types of network cables, along with images and a brief description of where each is commonly used.

Network Cable

Image Common Use Source

Ethernet (Twisted Pair/Cat5e/Cat6)

| Commonly used to connect computers, routers, switches, and other devices in home and office LANs. (Wikipedia) | Wikimedia Commons – Network cables category |

| Coaxial Cable |

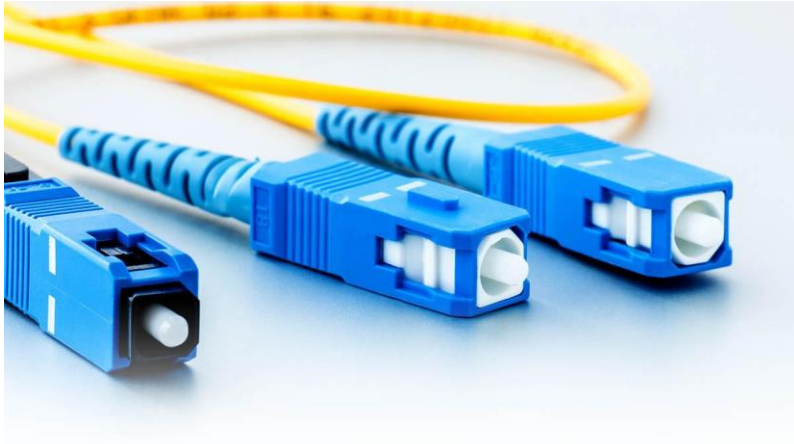

| Commonly used for cable TV, cable internet connections, and some communication systems. (Wikipedia) | Wikipedia – Coaxial cable |

| Fiber Optic Cable |

| Commonly used for high-speed internet, data centers, and long-distance network communication. (Wikipedia) | Wikimedia Commons – Optical fiber cable image |